[03 June 2020]
Internal displacement of indigenous people due to the expansion of security force operations in the Provinces of Papua and West Papua in Indonesia

Background

Since the killing of 19 Indonesian government contractors in the regency of Nduga on 2 December 2018,1 the Government of Indonesia has deployed additional troops in multiple Papuan regencies of the central highlands2 in an attempt to arrest the perpetrators and demonstrate military strength against the West Papua National Liberation Army (TPNPB). The central highlands are known as the stronghold of the TPNPB.

The Government’s approach to managing the conflict in the Provinces of Papua and West Papua through police and military interventions has far-reaching consequences for the indigenous peoples in the central highlands as it perpetuates the cycle of violence in these areas. Security force operations against the TPNPB often lead to further armed clashes and deployment of non-organic troops3 from other regions in Indonesia, and are often accompanied by violations of rights and internal displacement of the indigenous population.

Since the beginning of 2020 at least seven civilians have reportedly been killed by security forces during such operations. Others have been subjected to torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment as they are suspected to be associated with the TPNPB. All reported victims of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishments and killings throughout 2020 were indigenous Papuans.

Mimika Regency

An escalation of the armed conflict in the regency of Mimika took place in early March 2020. The police and the military deployed additional troops to the Tembagapura district after TPNPB forces killed a police officer in the village of Arwanop on 29 February 2020. Subsequent armed clashes between TPNPB and Joint Security Forces4 in multiple locations resulted in fatalities on both sides and in the destruction of infrastructure. As of 15 April 2020, three civilians were reportedly killed in Mimika since the operation was launched. Observers stated that 1,531 indigenous Amungme people5 fled to the town of Tembagapura on 6 March 2020. On 8 March 2020, observers already counted a number of 614 internally displaced persons (IDPs) who travelled from Tembagapura to Timika. On 9 March 2020, buses of the mining company PT Freeport Indonesia brought 917 IDPs to the city of Timika, where they stayed with relatives or sought shelter in churches.6

The Papuan Police Chief, Paulus Waterpauw, claimed in an interview with national media outlets that the villagers fled their homes because they feared violent acts by the criminal armed groups.7

2 The area is isolated, hardly covered by any Government services and mainly populated by indigenous Papuans with the exception of a few small towns where the non-Papuans maintain small businesses or work in Government positions.
3 In the Indonesian context, the term “non-organic troops” means the troops that are not permanently part of the local territorial command. See “Political Reform in Indonesia After Soeharto”, Harold Crouch, ISEAS-Yusof Ishak Institute (2010).
4 Joint forces between the Indonesian Army (TNI) and Indonesian Police Force (POLRI).
5 They are from the villages Banti 1, Banti 2, Opitawak and Kimbeli.
7 The Indonesian police and military usually refer to TPN PB groups as ‘armed criminal groups’, usually abbreviated as KKB (Kelompok Kriminal Bersenjata). The term is part of the Government position that the TPN PB is a criminal organisation. It does not acknowledge the TPN PB’s political agenda and its struggle for political self-determination.
Intan Jaya Regency

A military operation has been taking place in the regency of Intan Jaya after TPNPB fighters killed two military members during an armed attack on 17 December 2019. Since the beginning of the operation, three indigenous Papuans, including an eleven-year-old boy, were reportedly killed by members of the security forces, during armed attacks in the Sugapa district. According to the JPIC Kingmi Papua, at least 15 villages in the districts of Sugapa, Ugimba and Hitadipa have been affected by the military operation, causing indigenous residents to flee their homes. Figures suggest that 1,237 indigenous people were internally displaced, 331 of them were women and children. The IDPs sought shelter in a catholic church in Sugapa. Others fled to the regencies Nabire and Mimika.

Puncak Regency

A security force operation in the Gome district of the highland regency Puncak resulted in the internal displacement of over 1,500 indigenous people from eight villages, mainly women and children. Between 24 and 26 August 2019, joint security forces conducted raids in multiple villages with the goal of arresting two high-ranking TPNPB commanders. According to local informants, approximately 20 houses in Tegelobak were damaged or burned to the ground. During the operation, two indigenous villagers were reportedly killed. On 17 September 2019, joint security forces allegedly shot dead an indigenous villager and two children in the village of Olengki. Four indigenous women were injured by bullets during the incident.

While some villagers sought temporary shelter in the surrounding forests and neighbouring districts, about 1,500 IDPs fled to the village of Yenggernok, where they were accommodated in tents in front of the Gome Presbyterial Office of the Kingmi Papua Church. Volunteers from Yenggernok stated that they did not have enough food for the IDPs. Food supplies donated by the Gome Sub-district police, the Puskesmas, the Women Empowerment Agency and the Social Affairs Agency in Puncak had already diminished by 5 September 2019, while the armed clashes in Gome were still ongoing. Two indigenous villagers reportedly died in August 2019 after being displaced from their villages due to the living condition during the displacement.

Lanny Jaya Regency

ELSHAM Papua documented a further military raid in the Balingga District of Lanny Jaya Regency, Papua Province. The raid occurred in response to an exchange of fire between the Indonesian Infantry (TNI-AD) and TPNPB forces in the village of Timonikime on 1 December 2019 as military members implemented a social aid program. Subsequently, the TNI-AD launched several attacks against the TPNPB near Timonikime on 2 and 4 December 2019. The military members reportedly searched multiple houses in Timonikime. Seven houses were allegedly burned to the ground and two indigenous villagers killed during the raid. Indigenous Papuans from the villages Timonikime and Manggalome reportedly fled to the surrounding forests in fear of repressive acts by the military members. The total number of IDPs in relation to the incident is not known. The local government evacuated non-Papuan motorcycle taxi drivers and teachers from the districts Malagai, Balingga, Popome and Pirime to the town of Tiom.

8 The XVII Cenderawasih Military Commander, Colonel Eko Daryanto, later claimed in an interview that his men opened fire at the boy because he was allegedly carrying a fire arm. Moreover, the security forces injured two minors and two adult Papuans with bullets.

Maybrat Regency

In Maybrat regency, West Papua Province, residents of eight villages have currently taken refuge in the jungle and neighbouring villages due to an increase in joint police and Police Mobile Brigade (Brimob) operations in the area. As the local newspaper Suara Papua reported, the operations took place between 15 and 23 April 2020, after the killing of one Brimob personnel by unknown assailant(s) while on guard duty near the logging site which belongs to the logging company Wanagalang Utama. Police and Brimob reportedly conducted raids, sweeping, pursuit, arrests and to torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishments of civilians, including destroying properties and frightening residents into running away from their homes. The police arrested four people: one member of Maybrat Municipal Police, one member of the National Committee of West Papua (KNPB), and two local village leaders. The joint operation personnel allegedly tortured another KNPB member Eko Lando Sakof by hacking his legs, paralysing him, and breaking his fingers before Brimob personnel handcuffed him. They then took him to Alam to a bridge where they attempted to throw him into the river. Meanwhile, reports have suggested that among residents who fled to the jungle, one person died due to an existing illness. Civil society organisations have urged the local authorities to investigate into the facts related to the operation and have demanded the Provincial Chief Police and Provincial Military Commander to stop the military and security operations in the region, to take responsibility on the human rights violations caused by the members of security forces, in full respect of rule of law and right to an effective remedy principles...

Update on the situation of IDPs from the Nduga Regency

The operation of the security forces in the regency of Nduga has been ongoing since 4 December 2018, following the Nduga incident. A voluntary humanitarian aid team estimated that a total number of over 37,000 people originating from 16 districts in Nduga were internally displaced as a result of the incident. In August 2019, the Papuan Ombudsman Office visited refugees from Nduga in Wamena. The Ombudsman estimated that 50,000 people were displaced – a figure which has not been verified so far. The Foundation for Justice and Integrity of the Papuan People (YKKMP) documented a total number of 182 civilian fatalities between 4 December 2018 and July 2019, consisting of 18 Nineteen Government contractors were executed by the TPNPB in 2 December 2018, while twenty-two victims were allegedly killed by security force members. The most recent case of extra-judicial killing and torture of indigenous residents occurred on 24 February 2020 in the town of Kenyam. YKKMP has shared the results of their investigation with multiple Government agencies including the President’s office in January 2020. None of the Government agencies have taken any measures to investigate the human rights violations or provide humanitarian aid to the IDPs.

19 The armed conflict in the Nduga Regency has been ongoing for more than 16 months, preventing indigenous IDPs to return to their villages. Schools, health centers and churches in Nduga are deserted as health workers and teachers have not returned to their assigned places of work.
21 adult females, 69 adult males, 21 female minors, 20 male minors, 14 female toddlers (below 5 years), 12 male toddlers, 17 female and 25 male babies – all indigenous Papuans. The figures have risen to a total number of 243 fatalities as of 27 December 2019. The majority of them died as a result of exhaustion, sickness and hypothermia.

In July 2019, the Ministry of Social Affairs prepared aid deliveries with a total value of € 44,079 for IDPs from Nduga, comprising 50 tons of rice, toys, school supplies, and sport supplies. On 29 July 2019, a meeting between representatives of the local Government, the Ministry of Social Affairs and the military was held at the Military District Command (KODIM) 1702 military base in Wamena. However, the IDPs rejected the humanitarian goods because the Ministry of Social Affairs insisted to distribute the goods through the military, whom the IDPs regard as ‘enemies’. Their culture forbids them to receive help from the enemy. In the end, the humanitarian goods were never distributed among the IDPs. The local Government in Nduga provided IDPs in the districts Mbu, Dal and Yal with basic food, such as rice, instant noodles, cooking oil, sugar and salt. IDPs in the regencies Jaya Wijaya and Lanny Jaya reportedly received occasional visits for the provision of health services by the health department of Papua Province. The majority of IDPs from Nduga did not receive any humanitarian aid supplies from the Government - they feel forgotten and neglected. The central Government has failed to set up refugee camps in coordination with local Governments in IDP hotspots like Wamena. Such camps could help to coordinate the distribution of aid and the effective provision of humanitarian services such as shelter, healthcare and education to realize the IDPs’ rights to housing, health and education. Many IDPs - particularly the children – are traumatized and fear the presence of police and military members in their villages.

Situation of displaced indigenous women and children

We are concerned about the cycle of violence which strongly affects the indigenous people in the Provinces of Papua and West Papua, in particular, children, women and elderly people. In Intan Jaya, 331 of the 1,237 IDPs were women and children, while in Puncak Jaya, most of the 1,500 indigenous people who were displaced from eight villages, are women and children.

The deaths of indigenous women and children among the IDPs are also very concerning to us. Among the IDPs from Nduga, between 4 December 2019 and July 2020, there were 77 women who died, out of a total of 243 victims, all indigenous Papuans. They died mostly from famine and illnesses, due to poor living conditions in the shelters.

In some of the affected regencies, IDPs have received temporary aid from civil society movements and/or government agencies. However, many IDPs are left to themselves and feel neglected by the Government. They are stuck in multiple Papuan cities where they live in church facilities, temporary shelters or with relatives.

Recommendations to the Government of Indonesia

- Respecting and protecting the human rights of indigenous Papuans and bringing the perpetrators of violations to justice.
- Allowing access to the Provinces of Papua and West Papua for international humanitarian organisations as well as for international observers and foreign journalists to freely report on the human rights situation.
